Grohe shower faucets are preset at the factory to allow for a maximum hot water temperature setting. This setting is actually related to the position of the handle, as it controls how far open the hot water valve is and, therefore, how much hot water is mixed in with the cold. The homeowner can adjust this setting to reduce the maximum hot water temperature.

Open the faucet mixer to release any pressure as well as drain any residual water left in the faucet or supply line. Remove the handle cover by using a flathead screwdriver and an appropriately sized Allen key, generally sized 3 mm. Unscrew the large nut that secures the cartridge to the faucet by using a large 32 mm socket wrench to loosen the cartridge and pull it away from the faucet.
