The institutions of the European Union are the seven principal decision-making bodies of the European Union. They are, as listed in Article 13 of the Treaty on European Union: the European Parliament, the European Council, the Council of the European Union, the European Commission, the Court of Justice of the European Union, the European Central Bank and the Court of Auditors. Institutions are distinct from advisory bodies to the European Union, and agencies of the European Union.

Institutions of the European Union - Wikipedia
The debates on a constitution for the European Union (EU) and on establishing democracy in postcommunist Europe in the 1990s reflected the attempt to regulate political behaviour and to enhance responsible government. Political institutionalization is therefore not a static but a dynamic process. Theories of institutionalization
