We Give Our Hearts to Dogs to Tear

Yet, we “give our hearts to dogs to tear,” as Rudyard Kipling writes in the poem that gave Chase the book’s title. Yes, they tear our heart—but their indomitable, timeless spirits heal it again and again.

We Give Our Hearts to Dogs to Tear

When we give the outward appearance of obeying God but our hearts are hard, God knows. We are deceiving ourselves and others, too. The only way we can operate from pure motives is when we “walk in the Spirit” (Galatians 5:16, 25). When we allow Him to control every part of us, then our desire is to please Him and not ourselves.

What does the Bible say about motives?

For real fans, “We Give Our Hearts” is also released as a deluxe 2CD-version which also contains an exclusive mini album featuring the band-anthem “Credo”, as well as three completely new songs that span the entire bandwidth the band has to offer, from the ultra-hard “Zillah” to the operatic “Liberty In Death.”.
